At the top of a mountain, not that long ago,
Quite near to the peak where today you find snow,
A big wooden ark came to land with a thud,
When the world had been flooded and covered in mud.

And in that big boat there lived a small crew,
Four men and their wives, who were running a zoo.
But they were quite glad to be safely inside,
Because everything living on land had all died.

After some months when the plants had grown back,
They opened the ark and out came a yak.
The hippos got off and let out a big yawn,
The sloths soaked up sun on a small patch of lawn.
